

KJV inspired eschatology and an end times outline book, basically from the period before a possible rapture to a millennium supposition. Including speculations about: - Mystery Babylon - and although as noted in the book that there might be a couple of possible layers or dimensions to it but a major characteristic of the period might be that women might mainly be ruling. Possibly at all levels of authority in society, possibly worldwide and including with a possible female pope. - Gog and Magog - and their possible connection to the ten kings and Mystery Babylon - The beast - including the possible location of his tabernacles in Israel, his deadly wound and type of resurrection Basically a view that Mystery Babylon might be a substantial period at the beginning of the end times (after a possible rapture) basically the period also known as the falling away and that it might end before the Gog Magog war and that in turn might only signal the appearance of the beast. (For those that might also think that with the possibility of Hillary Clinton as president (2016) and other female world leaders that it might even be the start of the Mystery Babylon period and without any malice intended, only have to see the description of the economics book to think that it might not require the ten kings to bring this oligarchy to a possible end. But rest assured and only for what it might be worth that whatever might happen on the short to medium term that I also think that America basically has to prosper in order to fit in with its possible end times role.) - Possible identities for the ten kings and therefore also for Antichrist (the unit) - A millennium supposition - Basically that the left/right political divide might again become a feature though some limited government supporters might even find it somewhat amusing. (Also available: a downloadable type of screenplay outline covering both books at the Facebook blog, beginning with the birth of the likely/possible beast and until his demise at the end of the battle of Armageddon - (titled, Asshur and in 3 parts) and were posted during November 2014 - also note the two corrections to part I and the related article, Cains city? it might also be easiest to use the Facebook timeline popup button to find the 2014 entries)
